1. Discussion: The Book

Now that the Siderfin Companion Charting book is on my website and I will be making it available in repositories, I can now return to the History of the Pencombe Family of North Molton a book which I started nearly a year ago now but set aside for my cataract surgery. It has been an amazing seven months as I recovered from the cataract surgery in each eye done 17 days apart and discovered a new world out there. I was born with strabismus and astigmatism but now appear to have just slight astigmatism perhaps however not sufficient to have to wear glasses normally. However, for up close work (and reading the speedometer on the car) I do wear glasses. Depth of vision is definitely not over rated; it is a marvelous human ability and one should appreciate it really. Most people have it I suspect; there is just a small group of people who, from birth, had their brain decide it did not like the confusing images it was receiving so shut off the one eye basically. I could see a little through it but for the most part I do not think it did any work all those 79 years. The only description I have of my reaction to anything visual in my infancy is my mother mentioning that my father had a bathrobe of many colours and it made me cry so he stopped wearing it! But I did not walk free of furniture etc until I received my first pair of glasses at the age of eighteen months. I immediately stood up and walked. Since I can remember some incidences involving my eyes, I did find that the world was not a steady place without glasses for who knows what reason. Somehow I could never get inspired to do research into that phenomenon since wearing my glasses appeared to keep it at bay. But it has disappeared and the world is steady-state like it is for most people probably. But I digress. This is actually inherited from my father so has absolutely nothing to do with the Pincombe family.

I am still at the beginning of Chapter 4, time may change how much pre family material I do collect so this could become a later chapter in time, which will be the First generation of the Pencombe family as known to me that is located at North Molton in 1486. If I am able to take this same family back to Pencombe, Bromyard, Herefordshire then it will be the third or fourth generation coming down the Hereford Pencombe family. But that remains to be seen. I have acquired a lot of information on the Pencombe family in Herefordshire and the likelihood is that they came to England prior to 1330 both by the extant records available and they are not listed in the Emigrants Database. They appear to be from Flanders but again all that is in an investigative stage. The yDNA points to a “French” ancestry but yDNA tends to be a rather global way to look at information as you can have similar yDNA over a wide range. But it is interesting none the less.

The process that I am about to return to with the book is extraction of data using Find My Past. The number of items is large for some as I work on each of the different spellings and a global look at the numbers is above 50,000 items. I did begin that process but Find My Past is always adding new material and I have come up with a few thoughts on how to extract this material so will begin again and it is a good check on my work as I discovered that my eyes were not quite as reliable as I thought they were having found some errors in the first book on the Siderfin Family now corrected on my website.

I am still collecting data and have about fifty documents to translate out of Latin which will begin in the new year. My Latin lessons have proven to be most fascinating and have quite taken on a life of their own. I highly recommend the study of Latin for anyone looking into genealogy of families as the Latin documents can be very interesting. I did keep up with my latin through the recovery period including my daughter sitting with me for the half hour or so lesson and typing the answers for me as I worked my way through the lessons. I did get more verbal exercise in Latin which is sort of a game with me now as I am certainly enjoying learning this language purely for its own sake.

2. DNA and its value in the study

When this study was created by Galen Pinkham and Dr Richard Pinkham the two surnames were chosen – Pincombe and Pinkham. Both surnames are used within the Pincombe family that descended from the North Molton Pencombe family. Given the knowledge that I have accumulated on yDNA I will continue reviewing the results of the yDNA tests that have been done within the project. I may also actively try to recruit more testers. I will continue looking at the latest finds in terms of archaeological studies regarding particularly ancient British yDNA but also more and more people are testing who live on the European Continent in the Flanders area so that too is something I will continue observing. More comments once I have thought through all of this and done research on what has been learned about the various haplogroups.

3. Landkey Parish Records

These burial records are transcribed from the fiche of the original Parish Records for Landkey, Devon. I have changed the orientation of the newsletter to make it easier to publish the transcriptions for Landkey directly from my Excel file. I only purchased the Parish Records into the early to mid 1700s so these records do not extend past that date.
