1. Discussion: The Book

The book The History of the Pencombe family of North Molton, Devonshire, England has grown to 40 pages. I am on Chapter 4 which will be the First generation of the Pencombe family at North Molton at the moment. If I am able to take this same family back to Pencombe, Bromyard, Herefordshire then it will be the third or fourth generation coming down the Hereford Pencombe family. But that remains to be seen. I have acquired a lot of information on the Pencombe family in Herefordshire and the likelihood that they came to England prior to 1330 both by the extant records available and they are not listed in the Emigrants Database. They appear to be from Flanders but again all that is in an investigative stage. The yDNA points to a “French” ancestry but yDNA tends to be a rather global way to look at information as you can have similar yDNA over a wide range. But it is interesting none the less.

I will be away from my computer though for about two months more or less. I will still be active but not in a research way whilst I let my eyes heal from cataract surgery. The process I am involved in at the moment with the book is extraction of data using Find My Past. The number of items is large for some as I work on each of the different spellings and a global look at the numbers is above 50,000 items. I will gradually work at that but will take my time to let my eyes heal on their own in the best way possible.

There will be a minimum of pictures in the book in order to keep the download size of the resultant *.pdf small. At the moment I am sharing a picture of my Pincombe grandparents and my mother on the second page. I have a number of pictures of my grandparents but not a wedding photo for some reason. I have what could be a possible set of pictures on their wedding day but there really isn't anyone who could verify that. I just know that two of the people in the picture are my grandparents. But again just under two years from now when I plan to publish the book under a creative commons license so that anyone can download it (for free) and the book that I write will remain free to anyone. How far forward in time the book will be I am still up in the air on that. I will bring the families up to census time (1851 preferably as there is more detail on birthplace) and perhaps up to 1911 but I am still a bit ambivalent on that.

I am still collecting data and have about fifty documents to translate out of Latin which will begin in the Fall. My Latin lessons have proven to be most fascinating and have quite taken on a life of their own. My daughter decided to study Latin as well and we have conversations which have been quite interesting. I highly recommend the study of Latin for anyone looking into genealogy of families as the Latin documents can be very interesting.

I do intend to keep up with my latin and that is the really exciting part as my daughter and I work on Latin at our speed but it will be possible during this two month period for me to continue working on my Latin with her support. I will get more verbal exercise in Latin which is sort of a game with me now as I am certainly enjoying learning this language purely for its own sake.

2. DNA and its value in the study

When this study was created by Galen Pinkham and Dr Richard Pinkham the two surnames were chosen – Pincombe and Pinkham. Both surnames are used within the Pincombe family that descended from the North Molton Pencombe family.

The 1524-1527 Lay Subsidy of Devon

The names marked in red correspond to the Pincombe names mentioned on the Visitation of Devon 1620.

Up until very recently I have mostly ignored the yDNA results for various members of the study in the yDNA surname project at FT DNA. With Y-700 results for two different sets though I now have to look at it differently. The basic results of both lines depicted tell me that one line is likely of Frankish origin and the other line is an ancient line in the British Isles. There are more than one member in each group from family lines that converge deep into the past. I do find it interesting that potentially both of these lines deep into the past have a possible Herefordshire original mention in the quite ancient British Records for the surname de Pencomb[e]. Having just worked through this scenario in a one-name study I bring to this discussion a few thoughts garnered by writing up my Blake family of Andover book (both are basically at the same level of writing). There were no surnames in English prior to the arrival of William the Conqueror, Duke of Normandy, in 1066. However, the French had been early to the use of surnames and this included areas around France namely present day Belgium and other areas close by that have a similar language group. Bringing surnames to England in 1066 did not result in immediate adoption although by the 1300s many English families were using surnames. Some appear to be acquired through marriages between the “new” immigrants to England particularly daughters marrying into the new landed families of French origin in England. Although the “King” had altered the ownership of lands themselves property on the local level quite often remained with the original land holder now doing his service to King William’s appointee or King William himself rather than King Harold II who had been defeated by King William I during the Norman Conquest of England.

I am at a precipice so to speak with regard to how I move forward on this subject. A surname is a name but for some people it defines them and being female and giving up my maiden surname (women no longer do that in Canada) my use of Blake is usual in my signature in emails and I value it highly along with my mother’s maiden surname. They define me more than my married surname does. My married surname conflicts me somewhat as I am not a Kipp; I really do not know the Kipp family from which my husband descends other than the work that I did for him at various research repositories through the years when my interest in genealogy was nil pretty much. I just always thought everyone knew everything in my family lines but I had my eyes opened (and my brain for sure) by my cousin George DeKay a well known genealogist (now deceased) in the London, Ontario, Canada area. So having my eyes opened in 2003, I do what I normally do and that is get educated in the subject at hand which becomes my concern and 42 courses from the National Institute for Genealogical Studies I graduated with my Professional Learning Certificate in Genealogical Studies in 2007 and my chosen countries were Canada and England (not surprising given my personal heritage). My roots in Canada are pretty shallow in that I have just one Canadian line – my mother, her father and his mother were all born in Canada as was I. But I manage to be related (my great grandmother Grace (Gray) Pincombe was first cousin to Sir John Carling) to an individual who contributed greatly to Confederation and was Minister of Agriculture for a number of years. I did always know that. I do understand the desire to continue on a path in life that one has learned where family is concerned. yDNA has upset many families I suspect over the past decade as it does tell stories that may belong way into the past or be recent.

I am not prepared to take on any research for other than the North Molton Pencombe family which is the subject of my family book. However given the knowledge that I have accumulated on yDNA I may continue looking at and reviewing the results of the yDNA tests that have been done within the project. The next newsletter may have more details.

3. Landkey Parish Records

These burial records are transcribed from the fiche of the original Parish Records for Landkey, Devon. I have changed the orientation of the newsletter to make it easier to publish the transcriptions for Landkey directly from my Excel file. I only purchased the Parish Records into the early to mid 1700s so these records do not extend past that date.
