1. Discussion: The Book

The book The History of the Pencombe family of North Molton, Devonshire, England remains at 40 pages exactly where I was when I was preparing to undergo Cataract Surgery. This surgery, very successful, considering I had strabismus and astigmatism and no longer have strabismus. The original lenses gifted to me at birth were faulty or as I am now seeing it they forced my brain to memorize almost everything because I did not have any depth of vision thus making it more difficult for me to orient myself especially driving. I just had make-run-arounds that let me initially as a young child cross the street without being hit by cars because I couldn't see how far or how close they were and it continued through my life to the age of almost 79 years (I wore glasses since I was a one year old). But now I only wear my glasses for close up work and driving (I like to be able to actually read the speedometer).

I am still at the beginning of Chapter 4 which will be the First generation of the Pencombe family as known to me that is located at North Molton in 1486. If I am able to take this same family back to Pencombe, Bromyard, Herefordshire then it will be the third or fourth generation coming down the Hereford Pencombe family. But that remains to be seen. I have acquired a lot of information on the Pencombe family in Herefordshire and the likelihood that they came to England prior to 1330 both by the extant records available and they are not listed in the Emigrants Database. They appear to be from Flanders but again all that is in an investigative stage. The yDNA points to a “French” ancestry but yDNA tends to be a rather global way to look at information as you can have similar yDNA over a wide range. But it is interesting none the less.

My estimate of being away from the project for two months was very optimistic as it is now four months since my first surgery but I decided to take my time getting used to depth of vision which is marvelous actually. Since most people experience depth of vision whenever they look out of their eyes they do not realize how much the brain depends on that particular asset of eyes. The work arounds are great thinking back and it built up a huge capacity to memorize on my part. It has been fun discovering that my backyard was quite a bit shorter than I thought it was as I looked out but it is still quite long at 180 feet from the back of the house to the fence.

The process that I am about to return to with the book is extraction of data using Find My Past. The number of items is large for some as I work on each of the different spellings and a global look at the numbers is above 50,000 items. I will gradually work at that but will take my time to let my eyes heal on their own in the best way possible. I said that earlier and it is a quote from the last newsletter but did not realize I would need to get used to mostly not wearing glasses unless I am driving or working on the computer. That has been an enormous change; I still reach for my glasses when I wake up.

There will be a minimum of pictures in the book in order to keep the download size of the resultant *.pdf small. At the moment I am sharing a picture of my Pincombe grandparents and my mother on the second page. I have a number of pictures of my grandparents but not a wedding photo for some reason. I have what could be a possible set of pictures on their wedding day but there really isn't anyone who could verify that. I just know that two of the people in the picture are my grandparents. But again just under two years from now when I plan to publish the book under a creative commons license so that anyone can download it (for free) and the book that I write will remain free to anyone. How far forward in time the book will be I am still up in the air on that. I will bring the families up to census time (1851 preferably as there is more detail on birthplace) and perhaps up to 1911 but I am still a bit ambivalent on that. Some of these families were huge in the 1800s.

I am still collecting data and have about fifty documents to translate out of Latin which will begin in the Fall. My Latin lessons have proven to be most fascinating and have quite taken on a life of their own. I highly recommend the study of Latin for anyone looking into genealogy of families as the Latin documents can be very interesting.

I did keep up with my latin through the recovery period including my daughter sitting with me and typing the answers for me as I worked my way through the lessons. I did get more verbal exercise in Latin which is sort of a game with me now as I am certainly enjoying learning this language purely for its own sake.

2. DNA and its value in the study

When this study was created by Galen Pinkham and Dr Richard Pinkham the two surnames were chosen – Pincombe and Pinkham. Both surnames are used within the Pincombe family that descended from the North Molton Pencombe family.

I am not prepared to take on any research for other than the North Molton Pencombe family which is the subject of my family book. However given the knowledge that I have accumulated on yDNA I may continue looking at and reviewing the results of the yDNA tests that have been done within the project.

Although I had thought I might discuss yDNA more in this Newsletter it will continue to wait for another time. I will continue looking at the latest finds in terms of archaeological studies regarding particularly ancient British yDNA but also more and more people are testing who live on the European Continent in the Flanders area so that too is something I will continue observing. More comments once I have thought through all of this and done research on what has been learned about the various haplogroups.

3. Landkey Parish Records

These burial records are transcribed from the fiche of the original Parish Records for Landkey, Devon. I have changed the orientation of the newsletter to make it easier to publish the transcriptions for Landkey directly from my Excel file. I only purchased the Parish Records into the early to mid 1700s so these records do not extend past that date.
